Unless specifically stated to the contrary, any statement of "Plaintiffs" herein represents the agreed statement of all Plaintiffs who have filed cases in the Northern District of California.

b. Statement of the California Cartwright Act State Court Plaintiffs

On behalf of the state plaintiffs' counsel, all firms with cases recently removed from Santa Clara County, California by Defendant Walmart.com USA, LLC, ² (the "Cartwright Act Cases" or "state cases") unanimously recommend that the Court first hear and consider any motions to remand any Cartwright Act Case as soon the Court is able to calendar the remand motion. Plaintiffs in the lead Cartwright Act Case Norem, in conjunction with the other state cases, have filed with this Court a motion to remand all the improperly removed Cartwright Act Cases and noticed a hearing for May 13, 2009.

Plaintiffs believe that the motion to remand will be granted, and therefore no motion to consolidate the Cartwright Act Cases with the federal cases should be permitted. The Cartwright Act Plaintiffs do not oppose the consolidation of the numerous non-Cartwright Act federal claims cases, but consolidation of the improperly removed Cartwright Act Cases with the federal claims cases is unnecessary at this time. After conferring with Plaintiffs' counsel in the non-Cartwright Act federal claims cases, the federal claims plaintiffs have stated that they have no interest in consolidating their non-Cartwright Act federal claims cases with the Cartwright Act Cases.

If the remand motion is denied, counsel for the Cartwright Act Cases will provide appropriate recommendations to this Court. Regardless of venue, the state plaintiffs counsel intend to coordinate the prosecution of the Cartwright Act Cases with the federal claims cases, as provided for in the

² The Cartwright Act Cases are as follows: JAMES NOREM, on behalf of himself and others similarly situated, Plaintiff, v. NETFLIX, INC. and WALMART.COM USA, LLC, Defendants, District Court Case No.CV-09-00956-PJH (Case No. 1-09-CV-133576, Santa Clara Superior Court); OSCAR MACIAS, on behalf of himself and others similarly situated, Plaintiff, v. NETFLIX, INC. and WALMART.COM USA, LLC, Defendants, District Court Case No.CV-09-00961-PJH (Case No. 1-09-CV-133878,Santa Clara Superior Court); JIM CORNETT, on behalf of himself and others similarly situated, Plaintiff, v. NETFLIX, INC. and WALMART.COM USA, LLC, Defendants, District Court Case No. CV-09-00960-PJH (Case No. 1-09-CV-134759, Santa Clara Superior Court); and JESSE RANDLE, on behalf of himself and others similarly situated, Plaintiff, v. NETFLIX, INC. and WALMART.COM USA, LLC, Defendants, District

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth, § 20.3 (2006) (and as proposed to Defendants prior to removal of the state cases by the Walmart Defendant). Due to the uniqueness of the claims asserted in their complaints, including causes of action under California Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et. seq., the Cartwright Act Plaintiffs would vigorously oppose any attempt to stay their cases either here or in state court were the cases remanded. In all other respects, the Cartwright Act Plaintiffs have no objection to the federal claims plaintiffs' proposal with respect to pretrial issues as set forth in their respective sections of this Joint Statement.

c. Defendants' Statement

Defendants agree that this Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§1331 & 1337 and that this Court has personal jurisdiction over the Defendants. Defendants have been served or have waived service in some, but not all, the related actions. Counsel for Defendants hereby agree to accept service of the Consolidated Amended Complaint on behalf of their clients. With respect to the California Cartwright Act actions that have been removed from state court and are now pending in this Court, a response to the motion to remand will be filed at an appropriate time.

Defendants note that the named plaintiffs and each member of the proposed classes in the California Cartwright Act actions is also a member of the proposed classes in the previously filed actions pending in this Court, and that the Cartwright Act claims alleged in the state court actions are identical to the Sherman Act claims alleged in the previously filed actions. Accordingly, regardless of where the Cartwright Act actions are venued, defendants will seek a stay of those actions in deference to the previously filed actions (or, in the alternative, consolidation with the previously filed actions). A number of additional related actions have been filed in state court; if any such actions remain in state court there will be a need to coordinate discovery and other proceedings with those actions.

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

On or about May 19, 2005, Netflix, Wal-Mart Stores, and Walmart.com, a wholly owned subsidiary of Wal-Mart Stores, entered into a per se illegal conspiratorial agreement to divide the markets for the sales and online rentals of DVDs in the United States ("Market Division Agreement"), with the purpose and effect of monopolizing and unreasonably restraining trade in the Online DVD Rental Market in the United States in violation of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C., §§ 1-2. The agreement is illegal even if analyzed under some standard other than per se illegality, such as the rule of reason.

The meetings that led to the illegal conspiracy began as early as January 2005, when Reed Hastings, the CEO of Netflix, called John Fleming, then the CEO of Walmart.com, to invite him to dinner to discuss the online DVD rental and DVD sales markets. At the time (and to this day), Wal-Mart and Netflix were far and away the dominant leaders in the markets for DVD sales and online rentals, respectively, with Wal-Mart controlling about 40% of all DVD sales in the U.S. and Netflix having about a 75% market share of online DVD rentals in the U.S. Fleming, who reported directly to Wal-Mart Stores' CEO Lee Scott, accepted Hastings' invitation; the two thereafter met and, as a result of the meetings and exchanges that followed, Defendants entered into the alleged illegal conspiracy to divide the markets for the sales of DVDs and online rentals of DVDs.

At the time of their initial meeting and prior to entering into the Market Division Agreement, Netflix and Walmart.com were direct competitors in renting DVDs online, and all three Defendants were potential competitors in selling new DVDs to consumers. Under the Market Division Agreement, however, Netflix, Wal-Mart Stores, and Walmart.com agreed that Walmart.com would stop competing with Netflix in the online rental market. Netflix agreed that it would not sell new DVDs, as it was well-positioned and otherwise had the unilateral economic incentive to do, but instead would promote the DVD sales of Wal-Mart Stores and Walmart.com. Since entering into the Market Division Agreement, neither Wal-Mart Stores nor Walmart.com has rented DVDs online and Netflix has not sold new DVDs. As a result of the Market Division Agreement among competitors, Netflix was able to charge higher prices for its DVD rental subscriptions and, in fact, did so. The Market Division

Agreement also served to entrench and enhance Defendants' dominant market positions and otherwise cause harm to competition, including enabling Netflix to charge higher subscription prices for online DVD rentals than it would have had they not entered into the agreement. Plaintiffs and all other similarly situated consumers in fact paid higher subscription prices to Netflix.

This case is brought as a class action on behalf of all consumers in the United States who, during the period May 19, 2005 to the present, paid a subscription fee to rent DVDs from Netflix. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves and other similarly situated consumers nationwide under Sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Antitrust Act. Plaintiffs seek redress in the form of treble damages and other relief for their injuries resulting from Defendants' violations of law and seek a declaration that the Market Division Agreement is null and void.

b. Defendants' Statement

The May 2005 agreement between Netflix and Walmart.com that plaintiffs have labeled a "per se illegal conspiratorial" agreement or "Market Division Agreement" was, in fact, a perfectly legal joint promotion agreement relating to online DVD rentals. The joint promotion agreement was lawful, not "per se illegal"; it was publicly announced and widely reported in the popular press, not "conspiratorial"; and it involved only a failed Walmart.com DVD rental business venture that had well less than 1% of online DVD rental subscribers, not the "division" of markets for DVD rentals and DVD sales alleged by Plaintiffs' complaints. In short, Defendants believe that Plaintiffs' case is grounded on fundamentally false factual premises, and, accordingly, have proposed a schedule under which the core issue of whether the joint promotion agreement may be considered a per se illegal "Market Division Agreement" would be determined through an early summary judgment motion after an early period of fact discovery in which Plaintiffs would be afforded a fair opportunity to test their theory that Wal-Mart and Netflix unlawfully conspired to divide the markets for online DVD rentals and DVD sales.

In May 2005, Netflix and Walmart.com entered into a joint promotion agreement relating to online DVD rentals. At the time, Walmart.com had fewer than 150,000 online DVD rental subscribers, a share of well less than 1% even under the relevant market alleged by Plaintiffs (which, Defendants believe, is far too narrow as it does not adequately account for competition from other sources). Netflix had built an online DVD rental business with a rapidly growing base of several million subscribers, and faced intense competition from its leading competitor Blockbuster (the leading "brick and mortar" DVD rental company and a recent entrant in online DVD rentals) and others, as well as potential competition from Amazon.com and other online DVD rental entrants. Based on the extremely limited success and future prospects for its online DVD rental business, and recognizing that its resources could be better deployed elsewhere, Walmart.com decided to discontinue that business, and held discussions with Netflix about how best to transition its customers to Netflix when it did so. Those discussions ultimately led to the joint promotion agreement, under which Walmart.com agreed to refer its existing online DVD rental customers to Netflix.

Contrary to Plaintiffs' allegation that the joint promotion agreement was "conspiratorial," the joint promotion agreement was publicly announced through a joint press release and was reported in numerous publications. The Federal Trade Commission was aware of the agreement, and pursued no action. For more than three and a half years, no one claimed that there was anything wrong with the joint promotion agreement, let alone that it somehow constituted a per se violation of the antitrust laws. Nonetheless, earlier this year, the Resnick complaint was filed in this Court, alleging that the joint promotion agreement was in fact a "market division agreement" whereby Walmart.com and Netflix had agreed to allocate the markets for online DVD rentals and DVD sales, and that this alleged "market division agreement" was illegal per se. The Resnick action spawned more than fifty virtually identical complaints in courts throughout the country, each brought on behalf of a putative class of online DVD rental subscribers.

Plaintiffs' core allegation is that Netflix and Walmart.com agreed to a per se illegal market division agreement, pursuant to which Walmart.com agreed to exit the market for online DVD rentals while Netflix agreed to exit the market for DVD sales. On their face, Plaintiffs' antitrust claims hinge on the existence of that market division agreement. Unfortunately for Plaintiffs, however, the alleged agreement did not exist. The published news stories that serve as the basis for Plaintiffs' claims contain no reference to it. In fact, there is no agreement restricting Netflix's ability to launch a DVD sales business should it choose to do so, and nothing in the joint promotion agreement between Netflix and Walmart.com restricts Walmart.com's ability to re-enter the online DVD rental business should it choose to do so. Rather, the joint promotion agreement is a perfectly lawful and uncontroversial transaction that was entered into for legitimate business reasons and that benefitted consumers by providing Walmart.com's small number of online DVD rental subscribers a smooth mechanism for transitioning to Netflix, if they wanted to do so, as Walmart.com chose to exit the market.

The joint promotion agreement provided significant benefits to customers and eliminated no competition that would otherwise have existed. Walmart.com's presence in online DVD rentals provided no constraint on Netflix pricing. That pricing, instead, was constrained by pay-per-view and digital video recordings via cable and satellite, online video-on-demand, sales of new and used DVDs, Blockbuster Online, the threat of entry from Amazon.com, and numerous other factors. The joint promotion agreement provided benefits to Walmart.com DVD rental subscribers by providing them with a replacement service provider in the wake of Walmart.com's prior decision to depart from this segment of the business.

For those and other reasons, Defendants contend that Plaintiffs antitrust claims are without merit.

3. LEGAL ISSUES

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

Plaintiffs believe that the primary legal issues include, but are not limited to, the following:

- i. Whether Defendants' alleged contract, combination, and conspiracy violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1;
- ii. Whether the alleged contract, combination, and conspiracy violated Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2; and
- iii. Whether the action may be maintained as a class action pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

b. Defendants' Statement

In addition to those legal issues indicated above, Defendants believe that these additional legal issues will be primary:

- iii. Whether there is any basis for Plaintiffs' claim that Netflix, on the one hand, and Walmart.com and Wal-Mart Stores, on the other, entered into a per se illegal market division agreement whereby Walmart.com agreed to exit the online DVD rental business in exchange for an agreement by Netflix not to enter the DVD sales business;
- iv. Whether the joint promotion agreement may be found unlawful under the rule of reason governing Plaintiffs' antitrust claims, in light of the fact that it affected less than 1% of even the unduly narrow relevant market alleged by Plaintiffs, in light of Walmart.com's independent and legitimate reasons for choosing to discontinue its online DVD rental business, in light of the absence of any prior competitive constraint from the Walmart.com DVD online rental business on the pricing of DVD rentals, and in light of the procompetitive benefits of the agreement to Walmart.com online DVD rental subscribers;
- Whether Plaintiffs can show that the joint promotion agreement had any effect on prices or competition in online DVD sales and can demonstrate any such effect on a classwide basis.

Joint Statement

There have been several related case motions and stipulations to extend the time in which Defendants may answer or otherwise respond to the various related complaints, all of which have been granted in this Court. Aside from the motion to remand in the California Cartwright Act actions noted above, there are no pending motions in this Court, although there is a proceeding pending before the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation as set forth in Item 14, below.

Plaintiffs intend to file a motion for class certification. The proposed timing for filing a motion for class certification is set forth in (a) Plaintiffs' Proposed Schedule submitted herewith as Exhibit A and (b) Defendants' Proposed Schedule submitted herewith as Exhibit B.

b. Defendants' additional statement

In a related case in another jurisdiction, Defendants filed one motion to extend time to answer or otherwise respond which was granted in part and denied in part. Hotard v. Netflix, Inc., CV-09-1938 (E.D. La.)(Dkt. No. 13). The Eastern District of Louisiana granted Defendants a 60-day extension of time to answer or otherwise respond.

5. AMENDMENT OF PLEADINGS

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

Plaintiffs intend to file a Consolidated Amended Complaint.

b. Defendants' Statement

Defendants will determine how to respond to Plaintiffs' Consolidated Amended Complaint once it is filed; Plaintiffs have stipulated that Defendants may defer their response until after the Consolidated Amended Complaint is filed.

. EVIDENCE PRESERVATION

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

Plaintiffs' counsel have notified their clients of their preservation obligations under law. As Plaintiffs are individual consumers whose most relevant records are maintained by one or more Defendants, it is Defendants' preservation efforts that are of paramount importance. To effectuate the preservation of all documents that could be reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in the actions, Plaintiffs intend to negotiate a proposed preservation order with Defendants for submission to the Court.

b. Defendants' Statement

Defendants have instituted litigation holds in order to preserve documents related to the litigation or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Defendants respectfully suggest that plaintiffs have not shown any cause for believing that any party to this case will refuse to honor its document retention obligations and believe, therefore, that there is no need to supplement those obligations with a document preservation order.

7. DISCLOSURES

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

The parties have not yet exchanged initial disclosures under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26. Plaintiffs' proposed timing for the exchange of such disclosures is set forth in Exhibit A.

b. Defendants' Statement

The parties have not yet exchanged initial disclosures under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26, and propose that the Court adopt the timing for the exchange of such disclosures set forth in the attached Exhibit B.

8. DISCOVERY

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

In accordance with the Court's Order of February 2, 2009, the parties held Rule 26(f) conferences on March 18, 2009 and March 20, 2009. There has been no discovery taken to date. As reflected in Exhibit A, Plaintiffs have proposed dates for fact and expert discovery in this matter. Discovery of the proposed class representatives should be minimal, while discovery of the corporate Defendants, as well as third parties, may be substantial. Plaintiffs do not believe discovery should be limited, other than as provided for by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Court's Civil Local Rules, except that 1) each side shall be limited to a total of 45 fact depositions of the Parties, without leave of Court, and 2) that any four depositions of each of the Defendants may be extended to a duration of 14 hours each, without leave of Court.

Plaintiffs do not believe that discovery should be divided in the atypical manner proposed by Defendants. As reflected in Exhibit B, Defendants seek to divide discovery into "class" and "merits" and further subdivide "merits" discovery between the issue of agreement (phase 1) and other remaining issues (phase 2). This multi-tiered discovery scheme would unreasonably protract discovery, including deposing some witnesses twice, and substantially delay the ultimate disposition of this case. There is no bright line distinction between issues of class certification, the existence of the agreement and the impact/damages from the agreement. For example, as shown by Defendants' Statement, Wal-Mart's allegedly weak competitive position is a key basis for Defendants' theory that Wal-Mart's exit from the market was unilateral and not a result of an agreement with Netflix, which would be an issue in Defendants' first discovery phase. But, Wal-Mart's competitive significance is also a key element on issues of the impact/damages from Wal-Mart's exit, which is the heart of Defendants' second discovery phase.

Defendants also schedule at least two rounds of motions for summary judgment, with a stay of all proceedings pending resolution of the first round of summary judgment motions, which would further delay matters with no concomitant benefit, as Plaintiffs have alleged per se, rule of reason, and monopolization theories. Defendants' proposal could add years to the schedule relative to Plaintiffs' proposal. Defendants' request to divide initial disclosures in a corresponding way would compound these problems.

b. Defendants' Statement

Plaintiffs have alleged that Defendants entered into a per se illegal agreement to divide the markets for online DVD rentals and DVD sales. That allegation presents a threshold issue which Defendants believe can and should be resolved through an initial fact discovery period and an early motion for summary judgment that would proceed in parallel with class certification proceedings. Contrary to plaintiffs' statement, defendants' proposal would not lead to duplicative discovery or substantial delay.

The early summary judgment phase that defendants propose would not, as plaintiffs contend, focus on whether the joint promotion agreement was an agreement, or on Wal-Mart's "weak competitive position"; rather, the initial phase of fact discovery and summary judgment proceedings would focus narrowly on the issue of whether defendants entered into a per se illegal "Market Division Agreement" as plaintiffs have alleged, i.e., an agreement whereby Wal-Mart agreed to exit the market for online DVD rentals in exchange for an agreement by Netflix not to compete in the market for DVD sales. Whether that alleged agreement did or did not exist is a narrow and limited question that does not require the broader consideration of issues such as market definition, competition, or pricing that would be relevant under the rule of reason.

Defendants' proposal also would not lead to duplicative discovery. Under defendants' proposal, plaintiffs would have the opportunity to depose the witnesses who are knowledgeable about the joint promotion agreement during the initial discovery phase; because any additional discovery phase would focus more broadly on issues such as the nature of the markets in which defendants compete, defendants' business decision making with respect to DVD rentals and DVD sales, and defendants' pricing and pricing decisions, and because the depositions during the initial discovery phase would have already covered issues relating to the joint promotion agreement itself, there would be little or no need to again depose those witnesses who are knowledgeable about the joint promotion agreement. Thus, while defendants' proposed early summary judgment motion may eliminate the need for broad and burdensome discovery if it is successful in disposing of plaintiffs' claims, it will not require duplicative discovery.

Accordingly, as set forth in Exhibit B, Defendants have proposed a phased discovery and pretrial motion schedule under which the case would proceed in the following phases: (1) an initial phase of discovery related to class certification issues and to fact discovery concerning Plaintiffs' allegation of a per se illegal market division arrangement; (2) expert discovery and briefing relating to Plaintiffs' motion for class certification and an early motion for summary judgment relating to the alleged per se violation; (3) additional fact discovery relating to market definition, competitive effects, damages, and other remaining issues; and (4) expert discovery relating to those remaining issues.

Defendants also believe that plaintiffs' request to take up to forty-five party depositions, an unspecified number of third-party depositions, and up to four two-day depositions, is excessive. Instead, defendants propose that during the initial phase of discovery, each side would be limited to no more than 10 fact depositions. During the additional discovery phase, if the case is not disposed of as a result of the early summary judgment proceedings, each side would be permitted to take an additional 15 depositions, for a total of 25 depositions per side. Either side would be permitted to seek additional depositions for good cause following a meet and confer with the opposing side, which should take place after the parties have served their initial disclosures. No deposition could exceed the seven hours permitted under Rule 30 absent agreement of the other side or for good cause shown.

Defendants anticipate that issues relating to e-discovery and document production will require significant attention. So that any issues may be identified as soon as possible, Defendants have proposed that requests for production be served at the beginning of the fact discovery periods.

9. CLASS ACTIONS

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

These actions are brought as class actions. In accordance with Civil Local Rule 16-9(b) and without prejudice to extending, revising or amending the following, Plaintiffs state:

1. Plaintiffs bring the actions on their own behalf and as class actions under Rules 23(a), 23(b)(2), and 23(b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on behalf of all members of the proposed Class, defined as:

Any person in the United States that paid a subscription fee to Netflix to rent DVDs, on or after May 19, 2005 up to the present. Excluded from the Class are government entities, Defendants, their coconspirators and their representatives, parents, subsidiaries, and affiliates.

- 2. The Class numbers in the millions, the exact number and identities of the members being known by Defendants.
- 3. The Class is so numerous and geographically dispersed that joinder of all members is impracticable.
- 4. There are questions of law and fact common to the Class and the members thereof. These common questions relate to the existence of the conspiracy alleged, and to the type and common pattern of injuries sustained as a result thereof.
- 5. The questions of law and fact common to members of the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, including the legal and factual issues relating to liability and damages.

6. Plaintiffs are members of the Class. Their claims are typical of the claims of other members of the Class, and they will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the members of the Class. Their interests are aligned with, and not antagonistic to, those of the other members of the Class.

- 7. Plaintiffs are represented by competent counsel who are experienced in class action antitrust litigation.
- 8. A class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy. Class treatment will permit the adjudication of relatively small claims by members of the Class who otherwise could not afford to litigate antitrust claims such as are asserted in this Complaint. This class action presents no difficulties of management that would preclude its maintenance as a class action.
- 9. Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the Class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the Class as a whole.
 - 10. The Plaintiffs' proposed schedule for class certification practice is set forth in Exhibit

b. Defendants' Statement

Defendants do not admit the legal conclusions as to the propriety of class certification pursuant to Rule 23(a), (b)(2), and (b)(3) contained in Plaintiffs' Statement and expect to litigate these issues at class certification. Defendants' proposed pre-trial schedule, which includes a proposed schedule for class certification briefing, is included in Exhibit B.

_0		Joint S	Statement

A proceeding is pending before the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation. The matter has been fully briefed and oral argument was heard on March 26, 2009. All parties agree that the cases from this Court and the other federal district courts should be consolidated and that it is virtually certain that the Panel will order such consolidation.

15. NARROWING OF ISSUES

a. Plaintiffs' Statement

Plaintiffs believe there is no prospect that this case will be resolved on summary judgment, as Plaintiffs will have sufficient evidence to take their case to a jury. There may well be summary dismissal of such affirmative defenses as may be asserted by Defendants. Plaintiffs' proposed dates for the filing of dispositive motions and/or cross motions, oppositions, and replies are set forth in Exhibit A.

b. Defendants' Statement

Defendants believe that these cases can be adjudicated, or at least substantially narrowed or clarified, through limited fact discovery and an early summary judgment motion relating to the existence of the per se illegal market division agreement alleged in the complaint. If, as Defendants maintain, the joint promotion agreement was not a naked restraint of trade but, rather, an arrangement akin to a merger or joint venture associated with procompetitive efficiencies, there would be no basis for the per se claim alleged in the complaint. Defendants would then prevail on the merits, or Plaintiffs would be required to pursue a theory of liability under the rule of reason that they have not yet alleged. Resolving that issue through an early summary judgment motion could eliminate the need for extensive fact discovery relating to issues such as market definition, the competitive effects of the alleged agreement, and damages. If Defendants do not prevail on their early summary judgment motion, Defendants would anticipate bringing one or more additional summary judgment motions following the close of discovery.
